SATURDAY, JANUARY 25. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER. [From Our Special Correspondent.] WASHINGTON, D. C., DEC. 17, 1878.

TRANSFER OF INDIAN BUREAU. A section of the President's message was of necessity devoted to the ever present Indian question. The red man is never out of view. He is presented as a triangular problem, the sides of which are military, financial and moral. Almost the last debate before the adjournment of the session was in regard to transferring the Indian Bureau from the Department of the Interior to the deubtful tenderness of the War Department. It . - referred to a commission for careful consideration, this commission is now in session, and it is interesting to note the tenor of the testimony given before it. The Secretary of the Board of Peace Commissioners, William Stickney of Washington D. C., is decidedly opposed to the transfer, and pertinently quotes from words attributed to both Gen. Sherman and Gen. Sheridan, "that the Indians must be punished, they must be dealt a hard blow, they must be wiped out." Language we confess more characteristic of our military that with such ideas obtaining in the Army the proposed transfer of the Bureau would be equivlent to an order for the extermination of the race. In all the broad land there ald not be found a member of the Society of Fr ends who would not earnestly protest against the change. After all these are, as a body, the most practical, earnest and personally devoted friends of the aborigines; and in that acknowledged relation have been listened to with equivocal results. The Commissary General, Robert MacFeely, thinks that a transfer would be better for the Indians, inasmuch as the matter of supplies could be more economically and systematically conducted, therefore the advantage to the government financially would be felt, and the peace of the frontier more assured. The President endorses the united suggestion of Secretaries Shurtz and McCrary in their recommendation to Congress, that a corps of "Indian Auxiliaries" be organized and placed under control of the army, to assist in keeping the different tribes on their reservations. The "young men" have at least one requirement of fine cavalry men-they ride well. It is not without precedent in history this utilizing the youth of an enemy-but it looks in the light of experience, in long acquaintances with the Indian nature, to be a hazardous venture. The result of the experiment now being tested at the Normal Agricultural Institute at Hampton, Virginia, where Indian boys and girls are being instructed in the arts of peace, is anxiously awaited. In a limited degree of course education has been tried, but never when the students could be so happily and so entirely removed from "home therefore great advancement in Indian civilization is anticipated. DIPLOMATIC APPROPRIATIONS. A very interesting and exciting debate arose when the bill on diplomatic appropriations was brought up in the House by Mr. Singleton of Mississippi, who has it in charge. In an economical spasm last spring, two thousand five hundred dollars was deducted from the four first class foreign nissions, France, Great Britain, Germany and Russia, making the salary of each fifteen thousand. ries to their original amount-seventeen thousand five hundred. Mr. Garfield of Ohio, who, in this regard has learned wisdom from experience, (to the amusement of people who had listened a few years ago to his flery sectional utterances) concerning the increase said, "That the man who would attempt to get up political excitement upon old sectional issues would find himself without the support of the country, but the man who wanted to gain the good will of the country must put himself in line of its leading thought, and that was the restoration of business, trade, sound noney, sound political economy and honest payment of obligations. Foreign trade was the most important factor in the restoration of business; yet here was a bill cutting down unwisely the salaries of foreign ministers." To this all the people said "Amen." The bill passed however without the alive to any question as though he had never passed through a Maine election-never heard of the horney handed Murch-or did not know there was such an element recognized as "Greenbacks" or influence " as in this well conducted institution;

· Labor Reform." THE SILVER AGITATION Is the most popular subject of debate in the House. dovetailed in on every occasion. The friends of bard money think, with reason, that now is the day and hour to effect their desires before the stalwart eighteen greenbackers enter next session, to turn the scale upon almost any question, so evenly is the representation divided.

There is already much speculation upon the speakership for the Forty-Sixth Congress. Each State has her man to recommend. Kentucky suggests Mr. Blackburn, but some newspaper man says "he is a habitual speaker"-in fact a talker upon every subject. Probably the man suggested among many, one who is eminently fitted for the distinguished honor, is the Hon. John A. MacMabon of Ohio. There is nothing of the demagogue in this gentleman's career; he is a conscientious, earnest democrat, but eminent for his fair estimate of the claims of all parts of the nation. He has a dignified presence, and there is no politician in public life to-day for whose ability there is more respect, or in whose uprightness there can be greater trust. The House as usual has been prompt to vote its own holiday. It adjourns on the 20th, and does not meet until January 6th, 1879.

SENATE. The only sensation which has been really worthy of note was Senator Blaine's speech of the 11th, on his resolution introduced on the first day of the Senate's convening, to inquire into "Southern Political Outrages." There had been much ex-citement in anticipation of this great effort of the Senator from Maine. Of course every one knew it could not otherwise than be a partisan effort, not only from the source, but by the sectional wording of the resolution. By ten o'clock people began to move towards Capitol Hill, and long before the 'morning hour" had passed there was not a seat unoccupied in the Senate chamber. The crowd vainly boping to enter stood crowded around the doors, and the tramping through the corridors sounded like rumbling thunder. Finally all was nyson's fair novice,

"Too late, too late, ye cannot enter now," moved away to find other entertainment-a thing not at all taxing in this city. Almost every country was represented; at least so it would seem from the crowd in the Diplomatic Gallery. It seems that foreigners enjoy our family quarrelsfor if any event of the nature of the Senator's speech is anticipated, the portion of the Senate gallery reserved for them is always full. Part of these national representatives were attracted by the well-known ability of the brilliant leader. - Mr. Blaine is a man of marked magnetism, and one of the very few who, after years of leadership in the House, would not be dwarfed by entering the Senatorial body. On this occasion he could not but feel a sensation of gratification in his audience of brave men and fair women. The prominent of all parties were present. He could not raise his eyes to any portion of the encircling audience without meeting either the smile of approval, or the frown of dissent from men and women whose influence and intellectual ability he was compelled to respect. He was in truth in the presence of the nation. He was eloquent, logical, bitter and enthusiastic at will; and swayed his audience as a magician. It is derisively termed "Blaine's bloody shirt speech No. 2," but its weight will be felt in the country. 2 might well be termed the bloody shirt the second. The first was in the House during the winter of 1876, and was answered by Mr. but by-one Senator. He is a man of nerve, and may have more than one chance for the White House. I met Mr. Blaine on the morning of his great effort, calling to see an ill friend, and one would not suppose he had anything more important upon his mind than a committee meeting. Person- (ALIFORNIA CUBE IN 2516 BOXES. ally everybody likes him-save Senator Conklingand their hatred for each other is chronic. The senator from Maine's popularity was well tested in this city when he was suddenly stricken, with what seemed a mortal illness, on the eve of the memorable Cincinnati convention which nominated Rutherford B. Hayes for the Presidency. Political friends and foes alike expressed earnest concern to learn the hourly bulletin, which his physician announced. Mr. Blaine was answered on the 12th, eloquently and warmly by Mr. Thurman of Ohio, and Mr.

Lamer of Mississippi. The Republicans do not think he could be met in an argument from his premises, but a very large portion of the country are tired of riding that political nag-(see quotation from Mr. Garfield on Diplomatic Appropriation Bill,)-and do not credit outrages all on one side. Mr. Thurman is always listened to with interest. He only made a short speech, not more than twenty minutes, and it was rather more humorous than is habitual with him. The first clause of his speech brought forth such a round of applause from the galleries that the Vice-President said, "The chair gives notice that if this applause be repeated the galleries will be closed." Mr. Edmunds of Vermont hoped the chair would add, " and the person guilty of this disorder taken into arrest." Vice-President-" The chair adds that." Mr. Thurman said, "And I hope there will be no interruption whatsoever. I did not say anything when the galleries cheered my friend from Maine, for I love an eloquent thing as much as anybody can,

and have sometimes cheered it when I did not approve." Senator Lumar's speech was more an effort to reply to Mr. Blaine, and delivered with impassionate eloquence.

DR. LINDERMAN. Great anxiety has been felt throughout the city, and in the country concerning the serious illness of Dr. Henry R. Linderman, Director of the Mint. This eminent official had a severe attack of congestion of the lungs in the early autumn, and though better, is not yet well enough to be out. Meantime as the term of his appointment (six years) has just expired, there is considerable excitement among aspirants for the office he has so long and so ably held. This office is one really far removed above politics, but it appears not possible that any spot in this country will not be more or less spattered by mud from this dark slough. It is not thought probable that any name other than Dr. Linderman's will be sent to the Senate, and chiefly because that body would reject all others-so highly do they respect his ability and so entirely do they trust his integrity. A new branch mint has been established in New Orleans, or rather the old one has been re-established; all the officers save the superintendent, have been nominated by the President and confirmed. The gentleman chosen or rather suggested for that important place called forth some witticisms from the press, as it was a no less magnates than elegant. Mr. Stickney suggests notable personage than Ex-Senator, Ex-Governor Foote of Tennessee, - Mississippi California -- Southern Confederacy United-States association. He is a cotemporary of Thomas Benton and William Allen. He has had a checkered career-lawyer, politician, litterateur. He was ever very forcible in an argument, and the most laughably choleric of men,-a man was not safe in his presence who was afflicted with a squint in the eye, lest the irate little gentleman should knock him down for making eyes at him. He is credited with three duels. He would doubtless keep good order in the mint at New Orleans. Governor Wade Hampton, of S. C., was elected one of his legs amputated below the knee,-the result of injuries received by being thrown from a thus: compensation. It is better to enter the Senate of the U.S. with one leg, than to remain Governor of same state has also lost a leg. However there is no complaint in regard to heads, and doubtless many of the states would swop Senators with South Carolina and know they had gained in ability. This coincidence recalls an anecedote of General law in regard to one member and only one being allowed an office in that Department. One day General Spinner was called upon and informed that in his bureau was a husband and wife, and one or the other must be removed. "There are but two legs in that family sir; the law provides for two legs and I intend both of those legs shall remain in my bureau;" and so they did. The old gentleman passed through the city, last week en route to Florida. He looks hale and hearty, and all parties unite in wishing long life to the "old watch dog of the Treasury."
